Report

It has been more than half a year since I came to Japan as one of the first bachelor students of GSEP. And it has been more than a year since I was applying to GSEP. When I was applying to GSEP, I had a big dream which I still have. And that dream led me to Japan, and made me head this journey to become an engineer. Even though I had a big dream, I had no idea about what exactly is an engineer, what engineers do, and most importantly I had no idea how to get to my goals and make my dream a reality. There were so many new things and people, which opened my eyes and who taught me a lot. But up until the day of the trip to NIPPON KOEI, I still was in a misery of knowing what to do.

During the trip I understood a bit about engineering, and also I thought about a lots of things about my future. When one of my teacher asked about internship. I even dreamed about working as an engineer in NIPPON KOEI.

I have acknowledged a many things about a role of engineers and their responsibilities. This field trip inspired me to study more and become a better engineer. Also advises from elder engineers were useful, motivating. And after the presentations about their work, I was amazed and I really wanted to graduate my university as soon as possible and work as an engineer just like them.

The trip was wonderful from the beginning.

I have to admit that dinner was good. And also discussing many things this professional engineers was totally inspiring. This field trip to NIPPON KOEI was wonderful. I should say that I am totally motivated.
